INTERIM DEFINITIVE EPHEMERIS FOR THE SATELLITE 1959 ALPHA, VANGUARD II, FOR THE PERIOD FROM 1605 U.T. FEBRUARY 17, 1959 TO 1604 U.T. MARCH 15, 1959	1

INTERIM DEFINITIVE ORBIT FOR THE SATELLITE 1959 ALPHA, VANGUARD-II

INTRODUCTION

The interim definitive ephemeris for the orbit of the satellite 1959 Alpha, Vanguard-II during the period of its radio lifetime is presented in this report. A summary of certain position information indicating accuracies for the orbital arcs underlying the ephemeris is presented in Table I. The detailed ephemeris information is presented at the end of this report in the form of tables which give the latitude and longitude of the sub-satellite point and the satellite height for each minute of time. The sub-satellite point is defined here as the point on the earth's surface over which the satellite was determined to be at the indicated time. This form of presentation was recommended by the International Geophysical Year agencies concerned, for use in specifying the orbital positions of IGY satellites.

Time is specified by giving in columns, the day, hour and minute of Greenwich mean time. Longitude and geographic latitude are specified to the nearest second of arc. East longitudes and north latitudes are taken as positive. The satellite height is expressed in kilometers to four decimal places.

DETERMINATION OF THE ORBIT

The ephemeris is based upon radio interferometer observations obtained from the worldwide Minitrack network established under Project Vanguard. The ephemeris was arrived at by obtaining a set of overlapping orbital arcs. Each individual arc was determined by means of a differential correction process of the Eckert-Brouwer type (1). The satellite position was determined using a formulation developed by Herget and Musen (2). This formulation represents both the secular and periodic perturbations due to the earth's oblateness. It represents the effect of atmospheric drag by identifying it with the linear part of the change in the mean motion which was observed to occur during the interval spanned by the orbital arc. The parameter which represents this atmospheric effect on the mean motion, and which can be interpreted in terms of a period decrement, was regarded as a seventh unknown which was solved for simultaneously with the six orbital elements in the differential correction process. The orbital elements given by the differential correction process were the semi-major axis, a , the eccentricity, e , the inclination, i , the right ascension of the ascending node, θ , the argument of perigee, ω , the mean anomaly, M_M , and the period decrement at the epoch, T_M . Initial conditions for the first orbital arc were obtained by methods such as those described in reference (3). The observations which form the basis of each orbital arc were discussed. The final differential correction result was based upon the observations which were retained. The value of the standard deviation of fit for each orbital arc is given in Table I in milliradians of arc referred to the observer. These are then the basic measures of the accuracy with which this interim definitive orbit is determined. The accuracies of the corresponding satellite positions are functions of the ranges involved. These ranges are of the order of 1000 miles on the average, hence the values shown in the third column of Table I can be thought of as approximate values of the uncertainties in the positions in miles.

The transfer from one arc to the next occurs at a time in the interval of overlap at which the radial distance between the positions specified by the two adjacent arcs is a minimum. Values of this distance and the corresponding differences in the coordinates also are given in Table I. Positions corresponding to both arcs at the transfer time are given in the ephemeris. The arcs are identified by number. The differences between the positions at the transfer times are comparable to the residuals within the individual arcs. Hence the complete ephemeris provides a piecewise continuous representation of the entire orbital arc.

Equator crossing information is presented for ascending nodes. It appears in lines between the entries for the minute vectors which occur just before and after the nodal crossings. These lines contain the day, hour, minute and second of the nodal crossing; the longitude of the node in degrees, minutes and seconds; the pass number; and the satellite height in kilometers to four decimal places.

Certain of the station alerts which were generated for the benefit of observers are also shown in the sets of columns giving the satellite positions. They give information about the satellite at the time when it crossed the station's meridian. Each of these station alert lines includes information identifying the station, the time of the passage of the satellite across the station's meridian in days, hours, minutes and seconds to the nearest millisecond, the zenith angle in degrees, and the range in kilometers to four decimal places. The zenith angle is taken as positive when the satellite is north of the station. The direction of the satellite's traverse across the station's meridian also is indicated. A key to the symbols identifying the stations and the positions of the stations are contained in Table II.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

A significant portion of the interim orbit determination presented herein was accomplished during the IGY under Project Vanguard. The computations were made at the Vanguard Computing Center* using Minitrack System data. The orbit determination procedures and perturbation program formulations so essential to the orbit analysis have been developed and applied through the combined efforts of many organizations including members of the staffs of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Naval Research Laboratory, the Naval Observatory, the Cincinnati Observatory, and the International Business Machines Corporation.
